

October 29, 1968.

Professor Tayyip Gökbiçin,
Edebiyat Fakültesi,
İstanbul Üniversitesi,
İSTANBUL,
Turkey.

HALASHI
KUN

29 OCT.
1968

Dear Professor Gökbiçin:

We invite your interest in a new periodical devoted to Ottoman history and Ottoman philology. The Archivum Ottomanicum, soon to go to press, will fulfill a need long felt by Ottoman scholars and by others for whom Ottoman studies have some importance. Your participation, and the participation of dozens of our colleagues around the world, will be essential in helping to maintain the standard of excellence which is intended for this periodical.

Taking as its model the well remembered Mitteilungen zur Osmanischen Geschichte, this new publication will lay stress on original contributions from specialists in the fields of Ottoman history and Ottoman philology. Beyond that, Archivum Ottomanicum will also publish contributions dealing with the relations of the Ottomans with Byzantium, with Europe, and particularly with the Danubian basin, with the peoples of the periphery of the Black Sea and of the Caucasus, and with the Arab and Iranian lands. The time span covered will stretch from the arrival of the Selchuks in Anatolia to the final partition of the Ottoman domains. In addition to major articles there will be included book reviews and communications of interest to all.

Published once yearly by Mouton and Co. of the Hague, the projected periodical will include articles in English, French and German. Articles to be submitted should not exceed 100 pages in length and should not involve the use of Arabic script for more than 5 per cent of their content. Contributors are invited to send articles by registered mail to 29 Claremont Ave., New York, N. Y. 10027. Authors will be informed within two months of the date of publication, the number of the free copies available and other details. Articles which are not accepted will be promptly returned.

We hope that as time and opportunity permit, you will join us in helping to make Archivum Ottomanicum a success as a means of communication in an important field.

Sincerely,

T. Halasi-Kun

Halil R. Halil