Dear Tayyib-bey,

I am sorry to hear of your initial difficulties in London, but I am sure things will arrange themselves very soon.

1. If you have a suitable lodging in London it is better to remain there. This time of the year is the "season" in England and both in Oxford and Cambridge the hotels are full.

2. The chief problem is that Mehmed should begin his English course and it is a good idea to send him to the School of English. Let him be careful about the buses and in crossing the streets.

3. It is nearly impossible to find a place where the three, or four, of you might work on English together.

4. I think the Turkish friends who were in England mostly went to the Technical School in Upper Regent ~~xxx~~ where there are several classes going on simultaneously.

5. The British Council is a powerful organisation and will certainly help you. It is better to visit them personally and not to deal with them by correspondence.

6. The Turkish Consulate General may also give you some advice.

7. If you happen to be in the British Museum, try to see in the Oriental Department Mr. G. Meredith-Owens. He knows Turkish and is a very kind man always trying to help Turkish visitors. I think he is the best man to give you advice. He is a former pupil of mine. Tell him I gave you his name.

With all the best wishes to you, to Lem'an-khanum and the children from both of us

Yours sincerely

V. M. Morozov

Whenever I can be of any use to you I shall be happy to give you my advice.

I am sure at the School of Oriental Studies Prof. B. Lewis and the staff of the Oriental Department will also be glad to give you advice.
